Fit before speed

Why I made this, and how to use it.

When I was in third grade, in-person school wasn't working for me. It taught one way at one speed, and I couldn't adapt to it. My family pulled me out, and we built learning around me: I told my parents what worked and what didn't, and they listened.

I finished high school at 13 through FLVS Flex, earned my associate degree at 15 and my bachelor's at 17. But I want to be clear: finishing early isn't the point. Fit is.

These pages are the questions I wish my family had written down, so you can talk it through together.

How to use this pack

1. Answer the Readiness Check together, circling one answer each.
2. Read what your answers suggest, then use the Conversation Guide.
3. Do the Monthly Check-In on the same day each month.
4. If you see slow-down signals, pause and talk (page 7).

From my experience

There's no score that tells you what to do. The value is in the conversation. Ask, listen, change one thing, and check again.

General information from one person's experience. Not educational, psychological, medical or legal advice. Rules and options vary by state, district and college; check the official sources where you live.

part 1

The 10-Question Readiness Check

Answer together. Circle one answer for each. There are no right or wrong answers.

About the learner

1 Does the learner say they're bored, stuck, or rushing through things in their current setup?

◯ Yes ◯ Not sure ◯ No

2 Can the learner explain what kind of learning works for them (face-to-face instructor, online instructor, reading alone, hands-on)?

◯ Yes ◯ Not sure ◯ No

3 Is the learner willing to give honest feedback on what is and isn't working, and to try changes?

◯ Yes ◯ Not sure ◯ No

4 When something is hard, does the learner keep going, or burn out quickly? (Notice what happens; it isn't about blame.)

◯ Yes ◯ Not sure ◯ No

About the family

5 Is at least one adult able to check in on progress regularly, even if they aren't teaching?

◯ Yes ◯ Not sure ◯ No

6 Are you open to changing the plan when something isn't working, instead of repeating how you were taught?

◯ Yes ◯ Not sure ◯ No

7 Do you have a plan for social life (clubs, activities, community, friends), not just for academics?

◯ Yes ◯ Not sure ◯ No

part 1, continued

Pace and options

8 Do you know the options near you (virtual school, online instructors, tutors, dual enrollment)?

○ Yes ○ Not sure ○ No

9 Can the learner slow down or take a break without feeling like they failed?

○ Yes ○ Not sure ○ No

10 Are you clear that finishing early is one possible outcome, not the goal for every child?

○ Yes ○ Not sure ○ No

what your answers suggest

Mostly Yes

You have a good base. Write down three things you want the learning to look like.

A mix of Not sure

That's normal. Pick two questions to talk about this week.

Several No

That tells you where to start, not whether to stop. Take it one step at a time.

What I'd say

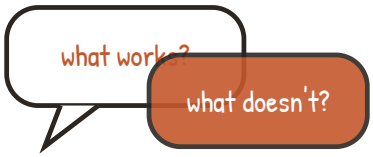

Early on, my answers to #3 and #7 would have been 'Not sure' and 'No.' My parents didn't know yet what social options existed, and I hadn't learned to say what wasn't working. Both got better once we started talking.

part 2

The Conversation Guide

Two questions, a pencil, and ten honest minutes.

Ask the learner

1. What's one thing that works for you in how you learn?
2. What's one thing that doesn't?

Write the answers down. Don't argue. Just listen.

What works

The one thing we'll change

What doesn't

Check in again on

What worked for me

My parents asked for feedback, and then they actually changed things. Face to face with an instructor, online with one, or no lectures at all: there's no single right style, only what fits the learner.

What didn't

Running homeschool exactly like in-person school, with the same linear lessons at the kitchen table. I've watched families do this, and it's easy to understand why. It's what we know. It's just not the point.

each month

Monthly Check-In

Same day each month. Relaxed. Month of _____

The learner fills in

The best part of last month

The hardest part

Something I'd change

Energy (1-5): 1 2 3 4 5

I want to go: faster / slower / the same

The parent fills in

I noticed they seemed

Something I'm worried about

Something I'll change on my side

Decision for next month, together

know when to pause

Slow-Down Signals

One sign isn't a verdict. Several together are a reason to slow down and talk.

Signs to watch for

- Dread or tears around schoolwork that wasn't there before
- Losing interest in things they used to love
- Cutting out friends and activities to keep up
- Perfectionism, or fear of making mistakes
- Praise tied mostly to speed

Pause or continue?

Answer yes or no together:

- [ ] The learner wants to continue at this speed
- [ ] They understand it, not just finish it
- [ ] They're sleeping, eating and seeing friends normally
- [ ] There's an adult they can talk to about stress
- [ ] There's room each week for something just fun

Mostly yes: continue. Mixed: change one thing and recheck in two weeks. Mostly no: slow down.

From my experience

Starting hard is normal. My first year of online school was rough: no classroom structure, lots of free time I wasn't used to, and missing my friends. But I'm not a doctor or counselor, and if you're worried about a child's well-being, please talk to a qualified professional.

what's next

Keep going, gently

A few simple habits that made the biggest difference for me.

1. Ask, then listen. Feedback is the best data you have.
2. Change one thing at a time. Then check again.
3. Plan the social side on purpose. It didn't happen automatically for me; it took about a year to find activities.
4. Protect rest and free time, and plan what to do with it.
5. Remember the goal is fit. Early graduation is one door among many.

About the author

Fabian Capre left in-person school in 3rd grade and was homeschooled from then on. He completed high school through FLVS Flex in 2021 at 13, earned his associate degree in political science from Palm Beach State College in 2023 at 15, and his bachelor's degree in political science from Florida Atlantic University in 2025 at 17. He is now working on a master's degree.

He is not a licensed teacher, counselor or lawyer. He shares what worked for him, what was hard, and what he would do differently.
